ISU Extension New Professional Award

Recognizes new Extension professionals who have made significant contributions to achieve the goals of ISU Extension. Framed citation.

David Brown
Hamilton County Extension Education Director

David Brown has made developing partnerships a key priority in improving the quality of life of Hamilton County residents. David continually strives to collaborate with others to connect them with innovative and unique Extension resources and services. He has strengthened Extension’s image through entrepreneurship, community leadership, and marketing. His knowledge of fiscal management and human resources also has made him an effective county extension education director.

Julie Hlas
External Relations Specialist

Julie Hlas is highly skilled in public relations. Her ability to put words on paper to show action and impact is highly advantageous to the organization. Julie’s commitment to educate others, both clientele and staff, makes her a priceless commodity. As an enthusiastic team player, Julie focuses on building relationships within the Extension system and in the communities in Northwest Iowa that ultimately benefit the entire ISU Extension program.

Clint McDonald
Harrison County Extension Education Director

Clint McDonald believes the responsibility of a county extension education director is identifying needs of residents and matching those with resources of ISU Extension. His successful programs include Farm Lease Seminars, SESS, Volunteer Tax Programs, Community Business Analysis, and Horizons. Clint uses his business background to market Extension programs and places high priority on maintaining a visible office and website as the front door to ISU. He sees the value to local residents of his involvement on state committees.

Sherry McGill
Woodbury County Extension Education Director

Increasing visibility, partnerships, programming and resources summarizes what Sherry McGill has accomplished in two years as the Woodbury County Extension Education Director. She secured grants and developed partnerships to offer a Wind Energy Conference, Spanish ChildNet Classes, youth nutrition and gardening programs, and the first Siouxland Lawn and Garden Show. Sherry has unending enthusiasm and fresh ideas for growing Woodbury County Extension to be its very best.
Meritorious Service Award

For meritorious achievements and educational contributions to clientele through dedication to duty and significant contributions to the mission of ISU Extension over time. Framed citation.

Renee Sweers
Nutrition and Health Field Specialist

Renee Sweers is an outstanding Extension employee implementing new programs, creating new partnerships, and securing grant support. She demonstrates positive leadership as a supervisor and is a caring and helpful colleague. She has a calm, positive influence on Extension staff. Renee provides quality educational programs including Servsafe classes and Poverty Simulations, which are respected in the area. She serves on many boards for the region.

Mary TeWinkel
Field Specialist/4-H Youth Development

Dedicated, committed, and creative are just three words to describe Mary TeWinkel. Her diverse program has touched the lives of thousands of youth and volunteers. She works hard to identify community needs and establish programs to meet those needs. Her strong community efforts have her partnering with schools and other community organizations to offer after-school programming, strengthening school garden programs, and providing summer science programming targeted at low income youth.

Robert Behnkendorf
County Extension Education Director for Kossuth and Palo Alto Counties

Robert Behnkendorf is a respected, conscientious, and effective educator. He responds efficiently to clients’ need and requests. He also serves responsibly on Extension committees and work groups. Known for his facilitation skills, Bob has assisted many organizations in establishing goals and implementing various programs. In addition to his Extension duties, Bob plays an active role in many organizations throughout his two counties as well as state-level committees.
Meritorious Service Award

Lois Wright Morton
Associate Professor of Sociology

Lois Wright Morton has a strong capacity to meld empirical information, group development, and action-oriented collaboration into efforts in areas such as community development (through her CD-Dial development projects); health, in which her extensive work on food environment and food insecurity issues has concretely addressed problems of rural and particularly elderly citizens of Iowa; and water quality and watersheds where she has been able to develop and institutionalize community involvement in water quality issues.

Paulelda Gilbert
Nutrition and Health Field Specialist

Paulelda Gilbert is a highly skilled professional who excels in community capacity building. She has lead Fort Dodge in the development of the PROSPER project including development of a steering committee, participant and staff recruitment, and finding local funds to keep the project financially solid. She also has used her skills with Lighten Up Iowa to create a community group to lead, promote, and follow through while increasing participation in the program each year.
Pride of Extension – Office Management Award

Recognizes an innovative project or effort to meet ISU Extension client needs and consistently demonstrate strong office management skills. Framed citation.

Nancy Johnson

Families Extension Office Assistant

Nancy Johnson deserves recognition for her enthusiasm, talent, and commitment in providing support for ISU Extension to Families. Nancy sets the stage for a congenial, constructive, and productive work environment which benefits both campus and field staff. She shares her creative talents through stunning photography, appealing materials, and attractive Web graphics. For the past 11 years, Nancy has demonstrated dedication and commitment to the work of Extension by continually going “above and beyond.”

Marsha Rehder

O’Brien County Extension Office Assistant

Marsha Rehder combines a high level of customer service with program knowledge. Her attention to detail and high quality work, along with her interpersonal skills, are key to an effective office environment in O’Brien County. Marsha’s a great team contributor, offering advice and suggestions on programming ideas and management. Marsha is not afraid to tackle new challenges and continually looks for ways to improve methods and procedures.

Sue Barnes

Howard County Office Assistant

Professional, organized, and dependable are but a few of the characteristics that best describe Sue Barnes. Sue has 17 years of working for Extension and serving the people of Howard County. Her expert knowledge of the job and her networking in the county make her a tremendous asset to ISU Extension. A certified Master Gardener, a certified livestock verification volunteer, and Child Care that Works facilitator, Sue lives the ISU Extension mission.

Julee Grell

Carroll County Extension Office Assistant

Excellence cannot be mentioned enough when describing Julee Grell. As the first person clients see coming in the Extension office door, Julee greets each with a warm welcome and personal interest. She went beyond job responsibilities during the absence of a youth coordinator and crops field specialist, making sure all programs ran smoothly. She repeatedly provides leadership at the local, area and state level. Julee is a true asset to ISU Extension.
Pride of Extension – Program Management Award

Recognizes outstanding efforts to provide ISU Extension programs and leadership to meet clientele needs. Framed citation.

Stacy Schmidt
Hancock County School Enrichment Coordinator

Stacy Schmidt has made ISU Extension in Hancock County a cool place to learn new things. She develops innovative programs that reach new audiences in the county, which have increased the number of youth in Extension programs. The visibility of her programs and her work with school-age audiences help market and create support for Extension.

Tonya Vetter
Audubon County Youth Coordinator

Reducing childhood obesity was the focus of a new programming effort in Audubon County called “Go The Distance,” which was developed and implemented by Tonya Vetter. The success of this program can be tied directly to Tonya’s attention to the needs of the students and her youthful enthusiasm. Whether she’s teaching “Go the Distance” or a “Creepy Crawling Creatures” day camp, Tonya’s excitement for the subject is contagious. Fun, energetic, and hands-on are qualities that mark her programming.

Nancy Adrian
Washington County Extension Administrative Assistant

Nancy Adrian serves as the Administrative Assistant for Washington County Extension. When the Washington and Johnson County Extension Councils voted to share a county extension education director in 2002, a new position was created to make sure the office could operate effectively in the director’s absence. In this position Nancy works closely with the county extension education director, making decisions in the day-to-day operation of the office, as well as doing the accounting and handling office assistant duties.
ISU Extension Achievement by an Individual

Recognizes a single outstanding ISU Extension effort by an individual, carried out with much originality or creativity. Framed citation.

Marti Elston
Administrative Specialist
Iowans 50 and older are underserved when it comes to intellectually challenging adult education. Many want to take high-level courses, but don’t want homework, exams, or college credit. Opportunities can be limited. That’s not the case for seniors in Des Moines, thanks to Marti Elston, central area administrative specialist. Her interest in adult education and gerontology has resulted in the collaborative Senior College @ the Pappajohn Center, serving more than 1,000 seniors since 2005.

Angela Rieck-Hinz
Extension Program Specialist
Angie Rieck-Hinz puts her heart into her job when it comes to educating Iowans on doing better nutrient management. Her dedicated work efforts over the last three years have lead to development of 13 fact sheet publications, delivery of more than 350 workshops statewide, and generation of more than $766,000 in grants and user fees. Angie’s commitment is depicted in her continued service of ISU Extension stakeholders including producers, commodity groups, industry, and state agencies.

Sherry Ford
Mills County Extension Education Director
Youth living in the Loess Hills of Mills County lacked knowledge about the importance of this rare landform. The outdoor education camp was designed to educate 6th graders about the Loess Hills, the environment, and wise use of natural resources through educational and teamwork activities. Sherry Ford collaborated with school personnel and community people to organize an overnight camp. Program evaluations indicate youth appreciate the natural resources and had fun learning in this unique educational experience.

Ken Stalder
Extension Swine Specialist
Since coming to Iowa State University in the summer of 2003, Ken Stalder has had a hand in nearly every Extension-related swine educational seminar, software program, presentation, and consultation opportunity imaginable. He works with faculty and staff colleagues on campus and in the field, mentors graduate students, volunteers for professional organization responsibilities, and continues to take on new responsibilities.
Achievement by an Educational Team

Recognizes a single outstanding ISU Extension effort by a team in delivery of educational programming, carried out with much originality or creativity. One framed citation for committee; individual citations for committee members.

Ag Decision Maker

Team Members:
William Edwards, Extension Economist
Don Hofstrand, Extension Value-added Specialist, Co-director of the Agricultural Marketing Resource Center
Ann (Holste) Johanns, Extension Program Specialist
Liisa Järvinen, Web Designer
Trece Lonneman, Program Assistant
Jean McGuire, Communications Specialist

Ag Decision Maker (AgDM) disseminates comprehensive economic and business information and analysis to farmers and agribusinesses through an electronic website, a CD-ROM subscription service, and a hard copy subscription service. Information is distributed in the form of a newsletter, information files, decision tools, teaching activities, and educational presentations. Users have found AgDM to be a convenient and fast source of information for their own businesses as well as for their clients.
John Deere Waterloo Works expected a 50 percent turnover in its workforce between 2002 and 2007. New employees were at least two generations removed from agriculture. ISU Extension was asked to provide agricultural-based training to wage and salaried employees. The company’s goal was to differentiate itself from the competition by training employees to better understand agriculture in North America and globally. Over five years, 167 sessions have been conducted with more than 4,020 employees.
Achievement by an Educational Team

Precinct Election Official Certification Training Team

Alan Vandehaar, Communities Field Specialist
Darrell Hanson, Delaware County Extension Education Director
Mary Ottmar, Audubon County Extension Education Director
Sharon Wasteney, Union County Extension Education Director
Sherry Glenn, Central Iowa Area Extension Education Director
Lois Hunt, Southeast Iowa Area Extension Education Director
Alan Ladd, Southwest Iowa Area Extension Education Director
Mary Schrandt-Prouty, Northeast Iowa Area Extension Education Director
Don Broshar, Youth/Communities Field Specialist
Jane Goeken, Communities Field Specialist
Alan Jensen, Communities Field Specialist
Sandy Scholl, Communities Field Specialist

Under the leadership of Alan Vandehaar, the Precinct Election Official Training is an example of ISU Extension at its best. The program involved all levels of the Extension organization, it helped gain national recognition for the state of Iowa, and it sustained an important partnership for ISU Extension. The team that provided the training demonstrated the finest examples of professionalism in teaching and the extension commitment to serving the people of Iowa. Finally, it generated new revenues.
Diversity Achievement

For outstanding performance in teaching that increases clients’ awareness of the value of diversity and that promotes better human relationships and understanding of diverse points of view; involving people of diverse backgrounds in Extension decision-making bodies and programs; effective educational efforts to diverse audiences. Framed citation.

Barbara Wollan
Families Field Specialist

Barbara Wollan finds ways to implement her skills in reaching the growing diverse audience in Central Iowa. She used her previous experience in the Illinois Quad Cities with a diverse staff and audience to develop and deliver diversity training for ISU Extension staff. Barb continues to adapt or create new programs for Iowa’s diverse audiences, presently leading an outreach program with the IRS assisting immigrants to fulfill their tax-paying obligations without a Social Security Number.

County Extension Education Director Excellence

Recognizes sustained distinguished performance and educational contributions to ISU and clientele by a county ISU Extension education director. Framed citation and $500 cash award.

Carol Schneider
Plymouth County Extension Education Director

Carol Schneider is the county director you go to when you want to get something done right. With more than 21 years of Extension experience, she has taken a bold lead in projects ranging from community collaboration programs and multi-county regional development programs to environmental studies and marketing surveys. She embodies all the proactive and positive characteristics needed in a community leader and in an ISU Extension county director.
Lawrence Werner has been a Delaware County Extension Council member for 15 years, having served as the chairperson for the past seven years. Throughout his tenure on the council, he has provided leadership during a period of growth and change in Delaware County Extension.

Lawrence supported a partnership between the Extension district and the county economic development commission to create a county-wide Value Added Ag program, which was recognized by former Governor Vilsack. Under his leadership, the council expanded efforts to educate families about managing their resources.

As chair, Lawrence has advocated efforts to show appreciation for 4-H volunteers. The council now provides each club and project leader with $20 in coupons for food and drink at the 4-H fair food stand and provides funds for Extension volunteers to attend training programs and meetings outside of the county.

Lawrence brings a calm, low-key approach to difficult situations that might arise. He has provided leadership to defuse conflicts, has chaired committees to deal with controversy, and works for solutions that meet the needs of all parties involved.

Lawrence farms near Manchester. He and his wife, Inez, celebrated 50 years of marriage in June. They have six children and are active members of St. Mary’s Catholic Church. He is a Vermeer farm machinery dealer and operates a custom baling business. He has served on the Delaware County Fair Board and as an officer of the Delaware County Pork Producers.
Youth Entrepreneurial Program
Nominated by Davis County Extension

With a goal of increasing the financial literacy of youth, Davis County Extension Council member Michelle Hartzler Combs presented the idea of using the “Raising Financially Responsible Children” program. One part of the program targets parents of children ages 3 to 16 and includes several one-hour workshops. The other part of the program targets youth ages 8 to 12 and focuses on teaching basic business planning, financial and banking processes, scheduling, marketing, teamwork, work ethic, and creating an entrepreneurial spirit.

The Extension Council agreed to provide $150 to cover workbooks and project costs. One council member has taken ownership of the program and works with the youth.

As a result of the program, six youth in the county designed greeting cards and have been selling them at the local farmers’ market. One Saturday, they started with 109 cards, sold 43, and made a profit of $94 in a three-hour time period. The youth are working on expanding the sale of their cards through local businesses. Having the cards in local businesses will help the community support youth entrepreneurship, but also may benefit the businesses by drawing in customers.
ISU Extension Distinguished Service Award
Presented at the All-University Convocation
Given as a tribute to Marvin A. Anderson, the first Dean of Extension at ISU. This is the top career award in ISU Extension. It recognizes sustained distinguished performance and educational contributions to ISU and clientele through Extension programs. Plaque and $1,500 cash award.

Jerry DeWitt
Director, Leopold Center for Sustainable Agriculture
Jerry DeWitt has been a long-time leader in sustainable agriculture extension and research in Iowa and nationally. His service has built bridges among stakeholders and explored common ground among many perspectives. He believes in sustainable agriculture as a means to identify and address problems and improve agricultural systems. His message, hallmarked by science and extension, is that sustainable agriculture provides a good living for families in ways that benefit the environment and support rural communities.

R.K. Bliss Citation
Presented at the All-University Convocation
For meritorious achievements and educational contributions to clientele through dedication to duty and significant contributions to the mission of ISU Extension over time. Plaque.

Holle Smith
Emmet County Extension Education Director
Holle Smith’s career in Extension has spanned 30 years. Strong leadership skills, along with extraordinary rapport with clients, young and old alike, have made a solid balanced program in Emmet County. Her ability to build and maintain relationships and collaborate with others in planning, implementing, and evaluating programs is evident. Highly respected as an Extension educator, she operates on a level playing field to meet the goals and needs of Iowa State University and Emmet County.

Jack Van Laar
Decatur County Extension Education Director
For more than 30 years, Jack Van Laar has provided balanced programming serving diverse interests through partnering and teamwork with local stakeholders and fellow staff. Examples include initiating a modern soil survey; ag and natural resources programming for consumers and producers; 4-H and other leadership programs reaching more than 40 percent of potential youth; collaborations serving families; and communities programs serving local governments, businesses, and economic development groups.
Excellence in Agricultural Programs Award – Livestock

Recognizes a field staff member for outstanding performance in agriculture livestock programming. Framed citation and $500 cash award.

This award will be presented at a later date, as designated by the Extension Agriculture and Natural Resources Program Director.

Joseph Sellers
Livestock Specialist

Joe Sellers’ career in Extension has emphasized helping producers succeed in the beef industry. He led programs that increase profitability to the beef enterprise in southern Iowa. These include the Chariton Valley Beef project, numerous forage management programs including the Model Farms Forage Demonstrations and the Rathbun Lake Forage and Livestock Project, and targeted education and demonstration projects on using corn coproducts in beef operations.

4-H Youth Director’s Award

Recognizes a staff member for outstanding programming in 4-H in terms of quality and quantity of programs. Framed citation and $500 cash award.

This award will be presented at a later date, as designated by the Extension 4-H and Youth Development Program Director.

Annette M. Brown
4-H Youth Development Specialist

For more than 19 years, Annette Brown has been a key partner in her counties whenever youth are involved. Annette’s ability to organize, teach, and facilitate has made her a sought-after community resource. Annette identifies emerging issues, secures resources, and collaborates with other staff, professionals, and youth to implement successful programming that impacts issues at county, area, and state levels. Her passion for helping youth learn and develop life skills truly makes a difference.
