According to Becky McCray of Small Biz Survival, you can provide valuable support to local businesses when you:

- Bring together businesses and locals in new ways
- Provide training and support that is unavailable from other sources in town
- Bring in outside resources to address key problems faced by businesses in your town
- Conduct useful research that no single business could do on their own
- Bring back useful information from regional events and networks

Prospering local communities understand that supporting local retail is key. Most local small retail business owners are so busy with the day-to-day details of running a business, they don’t have the time to equip and empower themselves and their employees with key foundational skills and tools. Without this knowledge, their businesses stagnate, and the local economy suffers and declines. The IRI adds value and increases benefits for local independent retail business in your community by helping you create the support network that local retail needs to thrive.

In Iowa, there are 266,382 small businesses employing 641,288 individuals. Nearly 50% of all workers in the state are employed by a small business.

IOWA RETAIL INITIATIVE

Prospering local communities understand that supporting local retail is key. Most local small retail business owners are so busy with the day-to-day details of running a business, they don’t have the time to equip and empower themselves and their employees with key foundational skills and tools. Without this knowledge, their businesses stagnate, and the local economy suffers and declines. The IRI adds value and increases benefits for local independent retail business in your community by helping you create the support network that local retail needs to thrive.

The Iowa Retail Initiative team, supported by the Community and Economic Development unit of Iowa State University Extension and Outreach, has developed a three-part nested program to strengthen independent retail in Iowa’s communities.

The program consists of IRI Champions, IRI Coaching and IRI Snapshots.
